Frommer's Review

Originally built in 1963, the Treasure Mountain Inn was reborn after new ownership took over in 2002, and it has since won accolades as Park City's most environmentally conscious lodging (thanks to its green supplies, recycling program, and salt-based Jacuzzi). With studios and one- and two-bedroom condominium units decorated in spare contemporary style, the rooms feature flatscreen TVs, iPod docking stations, full kitchens, and a king bed or two queens; some have jetted tubs and pullout sofas. The courtyard is especially attractive, centered on the aforementioned hot tub and a faux waterfall.
