

NORTH AMERICA > UNITED STATES > UTAH > PARK CITY

36 Hours in Park City, Utah

Jeffrey D. Allred for The New York Times

Crowds on Main Street during the Sundance Film Festival last January.

By CHRISTOPHER SOLOMON
Published: December 2, 2007

The Basics

Salt Lake is a hub for Delta Air Lines, which has nonstop flights to the city from more than 100 cities. In November, a search of nonstop flights from the New York area in mid-January turned up fares starting at about $380, out of Kennedy Airport or Newark on either Delta, Continental or JetBlue. A rental car really isn't needed at Park City — in fact, it's a hindrance — unless you plan trips to resorts like Alta or Brighton. Bus and limo services, and door-to-door shuttles like All Resort ($34 each way; 800-457-9457; www.allresort.com) abound.

The Sky Lodge, at the base of Main Street, will be Park City's newest luxury hotel when it opens on Dec. 26. The six-floor condominium hotel has 33 suites finished in Rocky Mountain loft style, with full kitchens and top-end entertainment systems; a Sky Club overlooking lower Main Street, with a large hot tub for owners and hotel guests; and Amatsu, a Japanese-influenced spa. Prices for doubles start at $375 or $1,125 depending on the season (201 Heber Avenue; 435-658-2500; www.theskylodge.com).

Also right on Main Street is the Treasure Mountain Inn (255 Main Street, 800-344-2460; www.treasuremountaininn.com), which says it is Park City's only environmentally friendly hotel, with an aggressive recycling program and other measures. It's a condo hotel that has recently refurbished its units. Winter rates are $175 to $650.

With its many second homes, Park City is a good place to rent a home during a vacation. Resorts West (800-541-9378; www.resortswest.com) manages about 150 higher-end properties ($325 to $10,000 a night) in the Deer Valley and Canyons resorts and even in Park City's historic area. The company also has a concierge service to arrange refrigerator-stocking and private chef service.